

The Four Pillars at Home

Identity, self-compassion, forgiveness, and grace — the ground every healthy relationship stands on.

PILLAR ONE

Identity

Who a child comes to believe they are — shaped by what we notice out loud.

TRY THIS AT HOME — “CATCH THEM BEING”

Once a day, name one true thing you saw them be, not just what they achieved. Praise the person, not only the grade.

Say: “I noticed how patient you were with your brother today.”

PILLAR TWO

Self-Compassion

How a child learns to speak to themselves when things go wrong.

TRY THIS AT HOME — “FLIP THE CRITIC”

When the harsh voice shows up, help them talk to themselves like a friend. Model it on your own slip-ups, out loud.

They say “I’m so stupid.” → “You made a mistake — that’s being human. What can you learn?”

PILLAR THREE

Forgiveness

Moving past mistakes to make room for growth — theirs and yours.

TRY THIS AT HOME — “THE REDO”

Walk the four repair steps together: own it • name the impact • make it right • reset. Share a mistake of your own first.

Try a “mistake of the week” at dinner — you go first.
It makes repair normal, not scary.

PILLAR FOUR

Grace

Meeting a child with understanding rather than only judgment.

TRY THIS AT HOME — “CONNECTION BEFORE CORRECTION”

Before the lecture, take one calm breath and ask one kind question. Your calm is the intervention.

Say: “Looks like a rough one. Tell me what happened.”
