|--------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| OBJECTIVE   | Students explore the gap between intent and impact, and articulate that understanding WHY someone hurt them does not mean what they did was okay. |
| CASEL FOCUS | Social Awareness • perspective-taking; intent vs. impact                                                                                          |
| VOCABULARY  | why • reason • intent • impact • understanding • not the same as okay                                                                             |
| MATERIALS   | Sammy puppet • chart paper • scenario cards (Unit 3 Lesson 2 cards)                                                                               |

OPENING REVIEW • 1–2 MIN

Show the "Words for Real Hurt" chart from Lesson 1. "Last lesson: name the hurt. Today: WHY do people hurt people in the first place? And does WHY matter?*" "

SAMMY • KIND COACH VOICE

"Sometimes when someone hurts me, I want to know WHY. Did they mean to? Did they have a hard day? Did they not know? Does the WHY matter?"

DIRECT INSTRUCTION • STEPS 1 — 4

1 Why People Hurt People 5 MIN

Build a chart of reasons (not excuses): "Sometimes people hurt people because... they are tired. They are hurting themselves. They did not see what they did. They were trying to fit in. They did not know better. They were scared. They were copying someone." None of these make hurt OKAY — but understanding helps.**"

2 Intent vs. Impact 6 MIN

Introduce the distinction: "Sometimes people MEAN to hurt us. Sometimes they DON'T mean to. Either way — the hurt is REAL. We can understand the WHY — AND still say the impact was real. Both are true.**"

3 Two Stories 7 MIN

Tell two short stories using scenario cards: one where the person meant to hurt, one where they did not. Discuss: was the hurt the same? (yes.) Did the WHY make a difference in how to respond? (yes — a little.) Did the WHY make it okay? (no.)
